To be clear, the question would be in view of an Event of Default by a Master Servicer, would the CH's be better off with the Trustee's replacing the MS or keeping the Master Servicer and pursuing other remedies. A large bank is the Master Servicer. Our client is the large bank Trustee. Perhaps you should first let me know which banks you could NOT be on the other side of. Thanks.

Jason,

Thanks so much for contacting me about this. NERA can certainly help and we have extensive experience with RMBS and in analyzing waterfalls and events of defaults. We are also associated with industry experts who work as special consultants for us in this area. How can we help?

I can send you several resumes and you can let me know how you would like to proceed. Thanks again for thinking of us.

Best,

Faten

Faten, how are you? Say, we have a client who is a trustee in hundreds of RMBS PSAs where there may be an EODefault coming up. As Trustee, they's then have to decide whether to replace the MS.

They need a consultant to help them reach a decision. Does NERA do that sort of thing? If not, do you know someone who could?

Thanks very much.
